Stan Carter Building Strength.

"After attending a United Way after-school program for migrant families and their children, I developed the skills and enthusiasm to attend and graduate from the University of South Florida."

[Today he is the program director of the very same United Way program that helped him.]

Building Care.

"I was placed in a foster home because of my mother's drug addiction. I was abandoned on my 16th birthday and became pregnant when I was 17..."

[Our program enabled her to graduate with her class. She is attending college to become a nurse.]

Building Community.

"We saw a need and we did something about it," Lynne says of herself and her mother. Jane agrees, adding, "We were basically the liaison between the United Way and our community."

[During Florida's devastating hurricane season, they help reach over 150 families with food & water.]
